

Embrace

Landscapes

I often sleepwalk through the haze of daze drifting streets of neighbourhoods at night where nothing seems to ever fucking change still creeping each night step silence welcomes me home through the shrouds of rain I'd disappear from here if only to escape
I sleep losing breath beneath the pounding days
It used to drown me
Without a surface to catch my breath
It used to drown me
It used to drown me inside of my head
Embrace the darkness
I pass unnoticed, towards my home
But no one knows me and I'm a stranger alone in this room
The blind and silent They walked right through me, invisible still Cause whats worse, than dying alone, when feeling crowded and trapped inside my own hell
The best of me was constantly drained
I lost my grip on endless days
It used to drown me, It used to drown me perceived as province, entombed with guilt Still it floods, the corners of my mind
It used to drown me, it used to drown me
it used to drown me inside of my head
