

Fields Of Ashes

Evereve

Our life flourished amid
A brown mother earth
Broke through the rocks
Broke through straight towards the sunStygian light winks through the clouds
Etched into this heart, this heart of mine
Shines onto my life from nothingness
And I ravished the rays of sunshineUnfinished, we participate
In the run of life, our inner strife
Hidden inside us
The need to end, to end our pain
Our life flourished amid
A brown mother earth
Broke through the rocks
Broke through straight towards the sunOne with nature, spoilt, without a zest for life
Sparkling bodies embraced by ebony nightsStygian light winks through the clouds
Etched into this heart, this heart of mine
Shines onto my life from nothingness
And I ravished the rays of sunshineUnfinished, we participate
In the run of life, our inner strife
Hidden inside us
The need to end, to end our painSometimes all our words are inadequate
For the burden of our hearts
Once ashes we will be and still the hunger for a new life
Or a soon coming death
And the dust we crumble into the willing companion
Of the four winds wailing over our soulsThe ashes stills the hunger of a new coming death
The dust is the companion of the four winds from our hearts
