

The Lonely Show

Thomas Donovan

Go ahead with what you said Tell a lie and make me cry
Some surprise was your disguise You were fake what a fool I make

All the best loving all the rest Break a leg, just knock 'em dead

Now I own the Lonely Show
I play the leading role
Then when you curtains close the love of lovers goes taking or leaving your heart tattered and torn apart
with love making down to an art
to charm you from the start

Now I own the lonely Show
get your tickets at the gate
give the act a hand doors are open for tonight's feature one night stand

Heaven knows the Oscar goes to those two eyes that mesmerize The Golden Globe goes to that load of love you lies and alibis

Center stage turns another page and the love illusions gone

Now I own the Lonely Show
I play the leading role
Then when you curtains close
the love of lovers goes
taking or leaving your heart
tattered and torn apart
with love making down to an art
to charm you from the start

Now I own the lonely Show
get your tickets at the gate
give the act a hand
doors are open for tonight's
feature one night stand Watch the winners come and go bring the house down for the blockbuster Lonely Show

Lyrics submitted by Thomas Donovan.

Lyrics provided by <https://damnlyrics.com/>