Man In The Moon

Hanna Rae

We go together,
Like oil and vinegar,
Shake it up and then let it be,
That's you and me.

We watched the sunrise,
Through two different sets of eyes,
But I can't help but think,
We see the same thing.

Cross my heart and hope to die,
I won't leave this place without you by my side.

Man in the moon has nothing on you
Even though he's way up high because,
Here on the ground, I've already found,
A man who's gravity keeps me safe from the tides.

You scratch my back,
And I'll scratch yours,
And if your hands get cold,
I'll make them warm.

You turn off the light,
And crawl into bed,
The nook in your shoulder,
Was made for my head.

Close your eyes count one, two, three,
Take a breath and bend your knees.

Man in the moon has nothing on you,
Even though he's way up high because
Here on the ground, I've already found
A man who's gravity keeps me safe from the tides.

Man in the moon.
