

She

moe.

She came, she came cool blues and a pocketful of pouring rain She came, she cameShe comes, she comes into the room like the morning sun just coming on She comes, she comesShe breathes, she breathes warm orange like a blanket on a summer's eve She breathes, she breathesShe leaves, she leaves ebbing slowly, then you really see what it means when She leaves, she leavesand did I tell you how she smiles and did I tell you how she cries and did I tell you how she lives and did I tell youShe smiles, she smiles walls tumble down if only for a little while She smiles, she smileshe flies she flies world turning yellow as closed her eyes she flies she fliesand did I tell you how she smiles and did I tell you how she cries
and did I tell you how she lives and did I tell you how she diesEverytime something's in the way Cries everytime she hears her brother say i'm first, you're behind climb the stairS and leave your shoes behind
