

Forget Your Heart (Piano Version) [B-Side]

Silverstein

Fight these eyes
They're drawing you, inside
Sign the name in marker
Watch the clouds as they got darker
Felt it start to slip away
All the schemes were made and plotted
All the rules have been forgotten now
I made it by the skin of my teeth again this time I'm waiting
Still waiting
To get away and make a change
Seasons last forever in this phase Forget your heart
It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone else
Maybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
And watch them drift out of our control I braced my body for the sudden impact
That was more than I ever thought that it would be
And when it knocked me over
I've never felt more stiff than sober now
I'm struggling to get up and run away I've wasted
I've wasted my life away
I've gotta change
I've gotta burn the book and turn the page Forget your heart
It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone else
Maybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
And watch them drift out of our control There's no return
To what you had when you started
Before you lost control
You will never recover Fight these eyes
They're drawing you inside Lay down
And break down
You're dead
Lie down before you lose control
Lay down
And break down
You're dead
Lay down before you lose control Forget your heart

It's weighing you down inside
As you confide your life to someone else
Maybe we're scared to be alone
We're not prepared to throw the stones
And watch them drift out of our control
