

Sound Of The Silk

...And You Will Know Us by the Trail of Dead

Carry me back to the field and the sun
The bright terraces where we used to run
Where the suns and weddings live in the air
Swear to me someone, you'll bury me there You'll [?]
My vision in this valley, alone Carry my lover back cross the tide
I long to be near her, and by her side
Where the rains of the day will whiten her bones
Two great rivers that convene in to one
To the sound of the self, as it runs through the low
My [?]
While the rain tumbles down
The seeds are stowed
My hidden is part of [?] These days I wake up late
Bright rays all over the place
Spread around the warmth to
Past the network of cell towers, water towers, fierce eternity
One worth killing for
I run back
This is you, [?]
Runs away
Makes it back
Doesn't matter
Comes inside
Makes you pay Once you stay
