Anything Will Do

Matt Duke

So there are many here among us
Who have lost more than they've gained
Amassing materials
Deserting the ethereal plainIt's like a smoke to calm the nerves
Like a drink to push the hurt down
Sadness runnin' the world and over everythingBut I believe in something
Like I believe in you
While I can't touch it, taste it, see it
Times like this, really, any damn thing will doHalfway home
Halfway home
Halfway homeSo your head is filled with questions
And the future's hard to see
They're calling you one way
And the heartache's to set you freeIt's that same old tired song
That keeps stringing us along, darlin'
Dreamin' up an exit but
The melody repeats and repeats and repeats and repeatsWhile it feels like nothin'
Loose the chains that bind
Let your spirit shake the dead weight
Run fast as you can toward some goddamned peace of mindHalfway home
Halfway home
Halfway homeYou're hungover and strung out and hooked on some Cosmic line
So dear Mother Nature could eat you alive
Is there a hopeless romantic that somewhere's still human kind
It's a wonder, my love, that you ever surviveYou have nothing more to give You've found nothing in return
That same old song
The saddest one you've ever heardBut I believe in something
I believe in you
And I promise, it gets better, my friendAnd sure, they're just words, but Any damn thing will doHalfway home
Halfway home
Halfway home
(Any damn thing will do)
Halfway home
Halfway home
(Any damn thing will do)
Halfway home

Halfway home
(Any damn thing, any damn thing will do)
Halfway home (Any damn thing will do)
