

Little Shadows

Fascinating AÃ~da

Here are the pictures of us in Japan we arrived as the cherry trees came into bloom
A marshmallow world for barely a day
With a hint of perfume

Out in the streets the crowds are immense Those temples are havens of absolute peace Away from the stresses of life they provide a form of release

That's me with Mont Fuji all shrouded in mist, it's exactly like all of those woodcuts you've seen Yes we bought a kimono, some beautiful fans and a ricepaper screen

On a whim we came home by way of Nepal, since Tom sold the business we've plenty of time, That's him by the Sherpas and me by the lodge, preparing to climb

Here's a dozen more albums I haven't yet shown Of tom and me standing around on our own There's virtually nowhere that we haven't been Or captured by strangers who wouldn't have seen,

Those... Little shadows,
Hidden grief
Silent as a withered leaf Little faces, never kissed Much imagine, sorely missed Hungry heart, quite untouched, Empty hands where small ones might have clutched Sad little shadows one has to resist.

After such a long trip it's so nice to be home Invitations to answer and bills to be paid Photos remind us of wonderful times as the memories fade

Plays to be seen, exhibitions to catch

Spontaneous suppers with one or two friends Happiness isn't dependant upon The money one spends Sipping our drinks as the evening draws in

With this view of the river we're lucky indeed I do sometimes dream of a garden, but then We haven't the need

Nieces and nephews feel free to drop in It's lovely to know they use us as a base Though it's tempting at times to give them advice
It isn't our place

Yes, Tom and I have the most wonderful life
And he's never dropped hints that I've failed as a wife And it's often enough it's only just us
And yet there are things one can never discuss...

Those... Little shadows,
little ghosts,
birthday parties, Sunday roasts holidays and paddling pools piano lessons, choosing schools little dreams that passed us by wishes fragile as a butterfly ah but regretting... is only for fools.
