

Isolation

Atomizer

A blinding white light, like a cold white sun in the night
But there's nothing at all that's divine about the discharge of rounds
    And as you crawl through the maelstrom of war
        Whatever you'll endure, you'll endure alone
    Falling deep into the abyss, with survival rate more hit than miss
        Wailing through the swamps, assessing every sound
        Judging the threat of the demons, airborne and on ground
    But one must believe, one surely must conceive
        Whatever you'll endure, you'll endure alone
        Because in the end, there's no-one but you
        Your comrades in arms have no power to do
    A thing for your plight, or a thing for your life
On your trip to hell, you'll be all alone, this is the essence of total isolation
Making resolves on your final breath, suddenly faced with your last conquest
    Will yourself to live you give it your best, now cradled in the arms of death
    Falling deep into the abyss, some rounds graze, while others pierce
    Falling deep into the abyss, with a survival rate more hit than miss
