

Time to Think

Sean Rowe

There's a lot at stake
A glass of wine
One last drink to hide behind
What's that sound
That's not her car
It's just a sure reminder that
She's almost home and that's a fact
Now you're drunk there's no going back
No I need one more night
What if I was wrong
What if the world was right
I need time to think
The floor is cold
The chair it speaks
I never got around to fix that creak
In the picture frame
They were still in love
They had their ice skates on
They were touching gloves
Now the moon is gone
It's just you and me
There's a spotlight shining on the Judas tree
No I need one more night
What if I was wrong what if the world was right
I need time to think
