

Fools Gold

Fitz & The Tantrums

Oh maybe I just wasn't good enough
To blow your mind, you know I've tried
Them silver lines they cut like blades of glass
Not worth the blood we've shed for love So give it up, start beating, hearts have gone cold
Had enough repeating, it's all been done before
Give it up, start beating, hearts have gone cold
Hey now, when we gonna wake up? But fools gold shines like diamonds in her eyes
Thought we had a million, but baby we got nothing
But fools gold shines like words that make us cry
We just keep on digging, find us something better
For the next time, next time
Something better, for the next time, next time So maybe I just wasn't strong enough
To tow the line, make true the lies
The fortune found, now it's all locked away
We've lost the key, how to believe So give it up, start beating, hearts have gone cold
Had enough repeating, it's all been done before
Give it up, start beating, hearts have gone cold
Hey now, when we gonna wake up? But fools gold shines like diamonds in her eyes
Thought we had a million, but baby we got nothing
But fools gold shines like words that make us cry
We just keep on digging, find us something better
For the next time, next time
Something better, for the next time, next time Oh, baby, I just wasn't good enough
'Cause, baby, I just wasn't strong enough But fools gold shines like diamonds in her eyes
Thought we had a million, but baby we got nothing
But fools gold shines like words that make us cry
We just keep on digging, find us something better But fools gold shines like diamonds in her eyes
Thought we had a million, but baby we got nothing
But fools gold shines like words that make us cry
We just keep on digging, find us something better
For the next time, next time Something better for the next time, next time
Something better for the next time, next time
Something better for the next time, next time

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnlyrics.com/>