Berlin

Barclay James Harvest

Came to your border
Looking back into the night
Falling down on the city lights far awayTell me the answer
"Who knows the wrong from the right?"
Years may come and years they go
You've seen your bridges burning
And the wheels of time keep turningLike a ship in the night
You passed along the highways of my life
And now my mind you're always in
And the ten-thirty flight will soon be headed my way
As she sails across the skyway of BerlinThought I heard your bells cry
Bringing the life to your face
The time for tears has passed away
Can't you see the night is lifting
And the sands of time are shifting?Like a ship in the night
You passed along the highways of my life
And now my mind you're always in
And the ten-thirty flight will soon be headed my way
As she sails across the skyway of BerlinOh, and to think of all the changes you have seen
Oh, and reflect upon the way it might have beenLike a ship in the night
You passed along the highways of my life
And now my mind you're always in
And the ten-thirty flight will soon be headed my way
As she sails across the skyway of BerlinLike a ship in the night
You passed along the highways of my life
And now my mind you're always in
And the ten-thirty flight will soon be headed my way
As she sails across the skyway of BerlinLike a ship in the night
You passed along the highways of my life
And now my mind you're always in
And the ten-thirty flight will soon be headed my way
As she sails across the skyway of Berlin
