

Bed by the Window

James King

Two old friends share a room
In a home for the elderly
Confided to their bed
Their bodies have given way
Old Joel by the window
Watch the days goes by Bill lives to hear the tales about the world outside
From the bed by the window
He tells how the children play
The lovers in the park
The ducks out on the lake
The little boy who'd half swept the sidewalk
When the sun came out each day
From the bed by the window
He tells it just that way
They share with each other
The stories of their lives
Relive all their memories and
Dreams of better times
Outside the leaves were changing
The summer turn to fall
And from the bed by the window
Old Joel described all
From the bed by the window
He tells how the children play
The lovers in the park
The ducks out on the lake
The little boy who'd half swept the sidewalk
When the sun came out each day
From the bed by the window
He tells it just that way
Then on a cold winter morning
In the light of the dawn
The bed by the window is empty
Old Joel is gone
And then they move Bill to the window
He couldn't hold back the tears
When he finally saw the view outside after all those years
From the bed by the window
He could see out at all
There was nothing out that window

But an old bricks wallNow a new man share that room in the home for the elderly

Confided to his bed

His body has given way

Bill lies by the window

As the days go by

And his new friend lives to hear the tales about the world outside()From the bed by the window he tells it just that way $\ddot{\iota}$  $\frac{1}{2}$
