Inventing Shadows

Dia Frampton

Its not surprising it could end like this
You're eyes are open even when you kiss
You're so distant
So cold, so resistant
You see the world in only grey and black
Now how can anybody live like that
Without screaming
Without dying for dreaming
You stare out the window, with the passing cars
You look at the sky, think you're unlucky stars
Your never quite happy, right where you are
So you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none, no there are none
Yeah you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none
You don't even see the sun, can you see the sun
It can be shocking that I want to leave
The way your living is like you're half asleep
You just drain me..
If I go, who could blame me
And you stare out the window with the passing cars

And you look at the sky, think you're unlucky stars
No, your never quite happy, right where you are Right where you are, with all that you are
So you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none, no there are none
Yeah, you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none
You don't even see the sun, can you see the sun
You're so young, so beautiful
So flawless in my eyes
Don't you know the world shines, everytime you smile
Why can't you just smile
So you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none, no there are none
Yeah you keep on, inventing Shadows
Where there are none
You don't even see the sun, can you see the sun

You dim the lights in the world I see
How I wish I could still believe
Time to save me
If I go who could blame me
