

I Begged You Everything

Bad Books

We slept for close to seven hours
All the way to your dad's basket case
I didn't catch the final score
So I prayed that we'd sink a few more
And I didn't mind and you didn't seem
To mind about me, but I was wrong
Who wouldn't fear to leave it all?
'Cause it's gonna come, it's gotta come
I am the widow, the spider-ed king
There's web in your teeth
And there's holes in the ceiling
And I wanted more, I left with nothing
Who's really lost and who's really winning?
I begged again, you said hello
For now that's all I know
Now I remember the exhaust and remains
A shallow shadow hung across my brand new drapes
And I gave my car away
Down towards the post office
Man told me he needed it more
I believed him, went home and slept more
And that's what gets me sometimes
That's what struck me blind
And that's why there's no time
That's why I still try, and that's why
I begged you everything
I begged you everything
Begged you everything, everything
Fuck am I supposed to do
When you just lie your arms in mine?
Fuck am I supposed to do
When you never lie about telling a lie?
So what was I supposed to do?
Just keep on trying through sleepless nights?
Fuck am I supposed to choose?
'Cause I begged you everything, everything
I can remember wishing that
The season had lasted a little longer
It don't, and we die, if not me
Then to my pride, if not now, then tonight
If not then, we just might give up trying
