Henry

Melody Pool

Henry,
do you feel awake in the morning?
Henry,
Do you tend to break come the light?
For I feel the same Though I'm not to blame
To of lost my hears desire Oh, Henry,
you'l be lonely for a whileAnd trust me,
I wouldn't take you back in a heartbeat And mostly,
I lie awake at night with my rage
You loved me so Though you strayed, yes I know and frankly I'm straying now Oh, Henry,
you'll need to move along somehowI was born in the mist of a waning moon
And as a child I wandered through the dark and the gloom
And it spilled into my womanhood
And now I'm sad for most of the timeBut there's beauty in a woman who is bound to herself
There's no beauty in a woman who won't respect herself
But there are your choices, babe and the choice to live without you is mineAnd truth be told I've kicked and screamed so loud I've brought the whole house down And I completely blame you for that Oh, aye it's courage, courage, courage that you lackHenry, you had everybody on your side And strangely, you threw it all away for just a night I thought you had sense but your last pretense was to shatter my forgiveness for good Oh, Henry
you did what i thought you never wouldI was born in the mist of a waning moon
And as a child I wandered through the dark and the gloom
And it spilled into my womanhood
And now I'm sad for most of the timeBut there's beauty in this woman who is bound to herself
There's no beauty in that woman who won't respect herself
But there are your choices, babe and the choice to live without you is mine you made your choices, babe

So the choice to live without you is mine
