Measure Of A Man

Young Rebel Set

If one day you discover him
Broken down he's lost everything
No cars, no fancy clothes to make him who he's not
The woman at his side is all that he has got
Why do you ask him move Heaven and earth?
To prove his love has worth
Would he walk on water? Would he run through fire?
Would he stand before you when it's down to the wire?
Would he give his life up to be all he can?
Is that, is that, is that, how you measure a man?
If by chance all he has to give you
Was three words wrapped around your finger
Would that be deep enough at the end of everyday
And how will you ever know if a man is what he says
Why do you ask him move Heaven and earth?
To prove his love has worth
Would he walk on water? Would he run through fire?
Would he stand before you when it's down to the wire?
Would he give his life up to be all he can?
Is that, is that, is that, how you measure a man?
He'd never give up, lets go of his dreams
His world goes around for his one true belief
Is that how you know? Is that what it means?
Would he walk on water? Would he run through fire?
Would he stand before you?
Will he be your anchor when the dark unfolds?
Will he always love you the best that he knows?
Would he give his life up to be all he can?
Is that, is that, is that how you measure a man?
Would he walk on water? Would he run through fire?
Would he stand before you when it's down to the wire?
Would he give his life up to be all he can?
Is that, is that, is that how you measure?
Is that, is that, is that how you measure a man?
