

Blue Skies Again

Jessica Lea Mayfield

dear winterbird how long can you last before it gets too cold and the earth asks you back dear bended bough
you're ready for the sun the old man is leaving a longer day's begun suddenly i can see blue skies again
beauty says nothing less
and our hearts'll mend
i promise you they do birch trees are bones stripped of their leaves and pressed between the pages of my memory
this heart of mine is ready for the spring open up my window winterbird take wings
it's not easy to pretend
i can see blue skies again
