

We're Not Gonna Make It

Story of the Year

she steps a shy foot into the room she knows that this day's been long over due and now as the tears fall down her face the pain is real and it's starting to show

she says again
until the lines that divide start to fade away
we're not gonna make it

and with a whisper she mumbles through i guess they just won't accept me and you they see a difference in skin but i thought that love was always true who would have known? that in a search for a parent's love her happiness no was just not enough she tries to keep it inside but through these hopeless eyes, the world is alive

she says again
we're not gonna make it
(I'll show you) until the line starts to fade away (I'll show you) until the line starts to fade away

i know i can show you that i'm not afraid no! (because tommorrow will come) and i'm not afraid (and we will no longer run) and i am not afraid (because tommorrow will come) and i am not afraid, not afraid

we're not gonna make it
we're not gonna make it
(i'll show you) until the line starts to fade away
(i'll show you) until the line starts to fade away (i'll show you) this line starts to fade it all starts to fade all starts to fade away
