

The Crown

New Found Glory

walking through another brick paved ancient town where i'll be found limping over all the same cracks with a broken back, feeling old hear a song that makes me miss home if she's waiting there, might be alone i wasn't careful what i wished for is it worth it when my heart is torn? i attempt jumping over but then a hand pulls on my shoulder there's a light above, and it's bright enough showing me i was meant to be something theres a light above, burning bright enough that it means i'm the king of my own world when i fall down, i will still believe i was meant to be something and i can't bare the weight of this crown i wanna be the one you run to when you're out of smiles, in a rut i had to learn it all the hard way the more you love, the more you hurt hear a song that makes me think of you and i flash back to your living room think of all i've given up i attempt jumping over
but then a hand pulls on my shoulder
there's a light above, and it's bright enough
showing me i was meant to be something
theres a light above, burning bright enough
that it means i'm the king of my own world
when i fall down, i will still believe i was meant to be something
and i can't bare the weight of this crown yeah i can't bare the weight of this crown so scared of missing out so scared of losing out so scared that i'm not taking the right way taking the right way
so scared of missing out
so scared of losing out
someone reassure me that i've taken the right way taken the right way there's a light above, and it's bright enough showing me i was meant to be something
theres a light above, burning bright enough

that it means i'm the king of my own world
when i fall down, i will still believe i was meant to be something
and i can't bare the weight of this crown yeah i can't bare the weight of this crown

Lyrics provided by <https://damnllyrics.com/>