

Sing With Our Senses

Stornoway

We go down to the sea
And we lower our arms and defenses.
And we sigh with relief
As we open our lungs and our senses. And this is the world that we belong to!

Aaaah

The music our senses need to tune into.
The song they sing to. We go into the forest and we open our minds and our senses.

In the shadows around us
there's an easier way to connect us
to the spin of the earth.

To the stir of the wild inside us.
And this the world that we belong to!

Aaah.

And these are the senses that we find it through.
And this is the music they exist to sing to.
The wetter the feeling we can all escape to
when we sing with our senses (when we sing with our senses).

This is the world that we belong to. (aaah)
When we sing with our senses (when we sing with our senses)
And this is the frame we need to see it through
And this is the space we have to shrink into before we're standing in the picture, too.
(when we sing with our senses)
This is the world that we belong to.
