

Crying for You

If I should live in the past would you think less of me
There's a chance those memories will last for an eternity
I just keep waiting, perhaps even hating to find you gone
How could something so right turn out so wrong? I still remember the nights in the warm summer breeze
And the words of love we confessed that came out with ease
There was nary a lie, there were tears barely cried, maybe one or two
Now I spend all my time crying for you This crying for you never ends if tomorrow it happens again
It's not that I'm helpless, I just can't help crying for you
It's sad that we've falling apart, tears pouring down in the dark
I know it's all over but I just keep crying for you I just keep waiting perhaps even hating to find you gone
How could something so right turn out so wrong?
