Leaky Breaks

Manchester Orchestra

When leaky holes and fire escapes
Set the evening for tone
You and your holy halo start to burn
And eventually just froze
Sewn into the carpet
Just trying to thaw out whatever I know
The thermostat it won't go higher
Not that you or I know
And I was drinking heavily
Burst into your bedroom belligerently
Asked her if she's done a thing
Like stepping out and making a scene
So foolishly I, apathetic
So I blamed your family
And never mended it
Shitty brakes and balding tires
We're out around on the road
You and my little sister
Flashy, frequent, scariest snow
And we returned just fine
Started to crack your analytical code
By the time you're convinced, I know
When I was drinking heavily
I burst into your bedroom confusingly
Yelled about a bunch of things
That if you looked you'd never see
For all eternity
And I blamed you for not being
Someone you could not be

Someone you'll never be
Now I see everything
And everyone you see
Killing time alone inside
A stripped and naked-est home
Couldn't catch my brain up
With the sights and fear that I saw
Fell into the doorway
Just hoping you had left the guitars

It's way too late for calling anyways
I guess I'll doze off
It's way too late for calling anyways
I guess I'll doze off
It's way too late for calling anyways
I guess I'll doze off
It's way too late for calling anyways
I guess I'll doze off
It's way too late for calling anyways
I guess I'll doze off
I've been drinking carefully
I creep into our bedroom
And watch you sleep
My mind it wanders onto things
That if I try I can't explain
As if there's something worse
As if there's something worse
To have weaned away your worth
When I was so absurd
Well, is there something worse?
