

Independence Day

Stoupe & Block McCloud

Do you know how it hurts when a fairytale burns?

Love is a refugee

Ain't that absurd?

You know how it feels

When sudden dreams slowly fade to grey

This is my independence day

She said she'd never love again

Because he broke her heart

And now she's blaming him

But he told her from the start

That what they had was special

But it ain't really love

Although he gave her everything

She never had his heart

But that's all that she needs

So what's tearing her apart?

'Cause loving him is hard

But that's all she really wants

She treats him like a king

And he treats her like a queen

But when he don't come home

He don't tell her where he's been

But she already knows

He got lipstick in his clothes

It's the message in his phone

And the smell of his cologne

But she don't say a tone or even moan

She don't stress, fight or fuss

She just keeps it to her own

When she cries, she dries her eyes

She never lied in her life

So his lies sound like knives every night

In the morning she's all right

'Cause she don't wanna fight

But tonight she'll be gone forever

Do you know how it hurts when a fairytale burns?

Love is a refugee

Ain't that absurd?

You know how it feels

When sudden dreams slowly fade to grey

    This is my independence day

    He said he'd never love again

    'Cause he don't want the pain

        Of having someone special

        Do that shit to him again

        And though it ain't his fault

    There ain't no-one else to blame

        For all those sunny days

        When all you see is rain

        All you got are memories

        But that just ain't the same

    'Cause the woman that he loved

        Must have simply gone away

        And everyday he wakes up

        Feeling like he's up in chains

        And now her sweetest touch

            Is like a shot to his brain

            And this is just a shame

    'Cause she don't say a thing

        Except to break his heart

        Like she's in a wicked game

        That he ain't trying to play

        But he's stuck trying to win

    'Cause he's stuck loving someone

        Who just ain't in love with him

            But he's in love with her

            And this is where it hurts

        No but she don't give a damn

            Or even know his worth

            She treats him like he's dirt

            That she can throw away

            But he ain't going away

    'Cause today's gonna be the day

Do you know how it hurts when a fairytale burns?

    Love is a refugee

    Ain't that absurd?

    You know how it feels

When sudden dreams slowly fade to grey

    This is my independence day

    So forgive me but I'm gone now

    'Cause I'm free and I'm never coming home now

    I'll find hope in forever

    'Cause I'm thrown now

And I'm flying and I ain't gonna go down
I used to think we were magic but slow down
You didn't know what you had when you had it
And now you realise that it's gone like magic
And I guess you really want me back, right?

Well, forget it

Do you know how it hurts when a fairytale burns?

Love is a refugee

Ain't that absurd?

You know how it feels

When sudden dreams slowly fade to grey

This is my independence day

Do you know how it hurts when a fairytale burns?

Love is a refugee

Ain't that absurd?

You know how it feels

When sudden dreams slowly fade to grey

This is my independence day

Lyrics provided by

<https://damlyrics.com/>