

The Day My Hero Died

Black City

The Day My Hero Died
I can't control my emotions
I couldn't see it come that far
Something is changed about you
And I don't know who you are

I pick up the pieces around me
To remember who I am

I grew up the day my hero died
I could not change the facts, but somehow
If I lose my senses, I'd rather say goodbye
I grew up with my hero

I'll give anything to know what you're thinking
A chance to get inside your head
You gotta help me out here
But you run away instead

I lay down my mask and my weapons
Just to show you who I am

You have just become a fatal connection
I have to cut away the truth in your lie
You are moving in a deadly direction
And everything you love, you push to the side
I take responsibility for my actions
And all the fractions that have kept me alive
I have to come up with another reaction
To blow the interactions that has to die
