

Falling Down and Falling Apart

Annie Humphrey

I know a woman Indian in her bones
Spends the pow wow dancing all alone
She can be lonely and sometimes she can cry
And drop her sadness to the bread she cries

I know a woman Indian in her eyes
Full blood in her her heart
Full blood when she cries
She can be afraid and sometimes she can shake
But her Medicine will never let her break

She don't want a warrior She don't want no brave
She don't want a renegade for an early grave.
She don't need no stolen hearts
She don't need no stolen heart.
She don't need an Indian man falling down and falling apart

I know a woman Indian in her hands
Wanting him the same, wanting him to dance
She's out there waiting no matter the weather
He'd walk through lightning just to give her a feather

But she don't want a warrior and she don't want no brave
She don't want a renegade for an early grave
She don't need no stolen hearts, she don't need a stolen heart!
She don't need an Indian man falling down and falling apart
