

Black Flies (Nixon Remix)

Ben Howard

Black flies on the windowsill
That we are
That we are
That we are to know
Winter stole summer's thrill
And the river's cracked and cold See the sky is no man's land
A darkened plume to stay
Hope here needs a humble hand
Not a fox found in your place No man is an island, this I know
But can't you see?
Maybe you were the ocean when I was just a stone Black flies on the windowsill
That we are
That we are
That we are to hold
Comfort came against my will
And every story must grow old Still I'll be a traveler
A gypsy's reins to face
But the road is wearier
With that fool found in your place No man is an island, this I know
But can't you see?
Maybe you were the ocean when I was just a stone No man is an island, this I know
But can't you see?
Maybe you were the ocean when I was just a stone So here we are And I don't wanna beg your pardon
And I don't wanna ask you why
But if I was to go my own way
Would I have to pass you by? And I don't wanna beg your pardon
And I don't wanna ask you why
But if I was to go my own way
Would I have to pass you by?

Songwriters

BENJAMIN JOHN HOWARD Published by

Lyrics © Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>