Places

Lou Doillon

We've named everything
From the ground to the walls,
Climbed every mountain,
And turned every stone there was to find there.We conquered the deep
Still looking for more
Trooped through the east, the south,
The west and the northWe built the machines,
The trains, the planes,
The cars of our dreams to reach out
For places, no one can findWe figured it out
Creation and god
Imposed our beliefs cause they're better than yours
Don't you know it?Perfectionned our weapons
But we still need more,
To balance our peace,
We're selling you war can you afford itWe're ten for a seat,
And we're still growing more,
It's a brave new world that I'm heading for,
Have you read it?We've named everything
From the ground to the walls,
Climbed every mountain,
And turned every stone there was to find there.We conquered the deep
Still looking for more
Trooped through the east, the south,
The west and the northWe figured it out
Creation and god
Imposed our beliefs cause they're better than yours
Don't you know it?Perfectionned our weapons
But we still need more,
To balance my peace,
I'm selling you war can you afford itWe built the machines,
The trains, the planes,
The cars of our dreams to reach out
For places, no one can findPlaces, places, places, placesWe built the machines,
The trains, the planes,
The cars of our dreams to reach out
For places, no one can find
