Another Town

Keith Whitley

Loving you was just a storybook of fair I've decided there ain't no real life anywhere Soon I'll be a faded picture in the book of your mind Another town is somewhere down the line Another town, another grocery store Another town, another set of swinging doors Somehow, I'm a little bit suspicious in my mind It's another town that don't need my kind Tell your mama, she was sure a dandy cook Tell your papa that I understood his looks If I put it all together, you're a piece that wouldn't fit Another town's a comin' up I guess Another town, another grocery store Another town, another set of swinging doors Somehow I'm a little bit suspicious in my mind It's another town that don't need my kind As I leave you, let me leave you with this thought Time is candy and we ate all that we bought Those little tears you're cryin' are just wrappers on the ground That a new wind blows into another town Another town, another grocery store Another town, another set of swinging doors Somehow I'm a little bit suspicious in my mind It's another town that don't need my kind It's another town that don't need my kind
