

You'll Always Walk Alone

Justin Currie

Lying asleep at night under the watching ceiling light
Safe in the fortress of your home
Remember you'll always walk alone

When you're swooning at the sinking sun
With that special girl you string along
And from the shore you throw another stone
Remember you'll always walk alone

Walk alone through your life and into the night
You will always walk alone

Arm in arm and hand in hand,
Tied together with a wedding band
Tethered to the line between the phones
Remember you'll always walk alone

Walk alone through your life and into the night
You will always walk alone

And alone every night you walk through my mind
There we go, you and I in tandem all the time
Our cover's blown, now it's all talk
How you always walk alone
