Cynical Fool

Teen Idols

Once there was a man with the world in his hands
And his visions were known far and wide
But power breeds boredom so friends he ignored them
His freedom just withered and diedNow he's grown old, reclusive and cold
Like a slug rotting deep in it's shell
Don't bother to reach him, you're too far beneath him
He'll tell you, tell you, "Go straight to hell"He's a cynical fool who's mad at the world
For holding him close to their hearts
If they can't compare to his arrogant air
With the feeble attempts to be smartAnd it's not the way they seem
That makes him feel so cool
It's his stature up above them not if they love him
Because he's a cynical foolSarcastic comments with mean, hateful contents
Are considered by him to be mild
His asshole aggression has become an obsession
Due to the problems he faced as a childPainted in a corner from slander made to order
He goes nowhere, has nothing to do
Don't feel sorry for him, just try to ignore him
I'm sure he'd do the same for you

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/