

Accident

TM NETWORK

The heir is introduced
She waltzes through the ballroom
    Swirling in her sequins
    Showing off her gown
She steps on her own train
    She falls, she cracks her jaw
Aghast her husband giggles, he gasps
    She slipped on spilled champagne
    And we crowd around the accident
        We want to see the worst
        We crowd around the accident
        We want to see what hurts
        They're leaning in the corner
        He's buried in a baggie
They say, he's mischievous sometimes
    She's pretty and her elbows are so pointy
They're dangerous, talking in the locker room
    His nose bleeds so profusely
    But no one tell him, he's the star
They watch like at the movies that he's famous for

And we crowd around the accident
    We want to see the worst
    We crowd around the accident
    We want to see what hurts
    Two stories, about to fall
    Boasting at the swing set
Marching down the hall, she yelled
    'Cause he upset her desk, don't yell
He's picking sides, he's hitching rides to school
    His father left in winter, he's no one's son
        If I can poke her with a pencil
        Then I can pop her with a gun
    And we crowd around the accident
        We want to see the worst
        We crowd around the accident
        We want to see what hurts
        We think, I'm glad it wasn't me
            And turn up the TV

And squeeze our eyes shut
But leave a space to see
