

Your Song

At Long Last

God, I'll have you know I'm scared of breaking this apart, of standing alone
She's all that I've got now, all that I breathe for,
and she stands alone too
I was selfish, I was brash,
I did some things that I'm ashamed to say I ever did But now it's cold and I'm scared, I've started now to realize that you were just trying to save me when I should've been trying to save you too So take this broken girl, that's more than a saint, stronger than stone, and rid her of pain Show her a road home, because I can't find pavement
I'm too weak to chase it, and too gone to stand tall
But know that I will try, if it's not too late I swear I'll be singing your song center stage,
I'd hope to see you there
