

The Answer Is Still No

No Use for a Name

(T. Sly/C. Shiflett/M. Riddle/R. Koff)
I couldn't understand why you left me standing here flickering out like a candle in the wind memories are laced with shame there's no intention of working out the problem that remains the same Little children standing in the hall never taught them anything at all if you were young again, would you do it different?
or keep on making your way trying to find the fiction in the fact of life?
Try to believe the words that you said to me are true but something else assures me I'm not through been denied so many times and so I'm told to sit back and ignore the truth, enjoy the ride
Never took a hand with her to school take a guess then tell us who's the fool and you're not supposed to be my responsibility maybe someday you'll regain your pride and realize life is too short not to try...
Does anybody care?
