Always Something

Lucy Woodward

Sometimes when you?re lying beside me, in your eyes I see
I don?t know but it?s something, it?s something
And it?s trippin? me up again
It?s like you?re here but you?re not here, I need to know where
But you won?t let me go there
Always telling me it?s nothing, it?s nothing
Well I had a vision
Of a lover in my best friend
It?s not like me to question
Something always gets in between
It twists and it turns, you know that it seems to me
Lately, I?m so unsure, I can?t put my finger on it, on it
Strange feeling ripping at the seams
And I?ve never heard the sound of my heart breaking
Like this before, before there was always something, something
I think back on the days when we were falling, it was so good then
Never worried ?bout a thing, no nothing
Well it?s funny how things change
Now a cold wind is blowin?
But I was hoping it?s not the start of a bitter end
Could it be that you're something is someone else
Only time will tell
I thought I knew me so well

I shouldn?t, I shouldn't put me through this hell
Something always gets in between
It twists and it turns, you know that it seems to me
Lately, I?m so unsure, I can?t put my finger on it, on it
Strange feeling ripping at the seams
And I?ve never heard the sound of my heart breaking
Like this before, before there was always something, something
Something?s always getting in between
And it?s always rippin? at the seams, yeah
Something?s always messing with my vision
It?s not like me to question, hey
Something always gets in between
It twists and it turns, you know that it seems to me
Lately, I?m so unsure, I can?t put my finger on it, on it
Strange feeling ripping at the seams

And I?ve never heard the sound of my heart breaking
Like this before, before there was always something, something
Come on, come on, come on
Come on, come on, come on, yeah
Before there was always something
Before there was always something
