I'm Not Your Girl

Reba McEntire

Felt so right for awhile, almost really believed
I could stay here forever, my heart could be free
Oh I wish it were that easy, but it's never been for me
I'm not your girlFeels so warm and so safe here, now don't get me wrong
But it's selfish to stay here, I'd be leading you on
Maybe someone else can give you
What you really, really want
I'm not your girlThey say people change
I wish it were true
It's something I've tried so hard to do
I can't explain
Why right feels so wrong
And I keep hearing the same old songSee, I've been here before, left a good thing behind
Can't see where I'm going, maybe love's really blind
I'm so afraid to lose the one, who was so hard to find
But I'm not your girlThey say people change
I wish it were true
It's something I've tried so hard to do
I can't explain
Why right feels so wrong
And I keep hearing the same old songOne day I'll come back here, and I'll knock at your door
She'll be sweet when she answers, then I'll know for sure
That life is never easy, in my complicated world
I'm not your girl
