Coffee Stain

Sarah Harmer

There's a coffee stain around your eye and lines that I don't recognize Everything changed from being okay, the night that you came home so late
I knew by the time on the stove that you were no longer mine alone
I guess we're all just out alone and everybody is only their ownOh, I loved you and I guess I still do, everything was going so good
I thought something bad might happen and then it did
If you know the difference between bad and good, thought that I'd know
But I cross my toes and that's how it goesNow maybe I'm a fatalist to let it all go at this
Like some balloon I'll probably miss, lost in a treetop
But, there's a coffee stain around your eye and lines that I don't recognize Everything changed from being okay, the night that you came home so lateOh, I loved you and I guess I still do, everything was going so good
I thought something bad might happen and then it did
If you know the difference between bad and good, thought that I'd know
But I cross my toes and that's how it goes
