

Put The Light On

Wet Wet Wet

He sits alone in a crowded station
And lights his cigarette
The light flickers slightly and tells him politely
His life's not at it's best She weighs him up 'cos his love's taken lightly
And love's her only regret
But love's not a sin in her eyes
She's asking him why Why are you leaving?
I just can't say
Why are you leaving?
He don't know daddy's gonna stay Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it He walks home with his pride in his pocket
And pulls it out with his change
And his love is something that's turned into nothing
Now isn't that strange She holds her head high, close to the bright sky
He's got his head in the clouds
He has not a sin in her eyes
And he's telling her why Why are you leaving?
I just can't say
Why are you leaving?
He don't know daddy's gonna stay Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it Why are you leaving?
I just can't say
Why are you leaving?
He don't know daddy's gonna stay Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it
