

Never Lost, Never Won

Marble Sounds

My smile is just a little wry;
I can take it with a grain of salt
Instead of getting sleep, I try
To make up for my lost and precious time I could play a role,
But I lost the cool to keep control
Never mind the deal;
It was well discussed, but not agreed It's a status quo again -
A draw in every game we play
I guess that sums it up:
We never lost,
We never won Not a chance we'll ever change
Or that we'll find the one to blame
No one's right or wrong;
We never lost,
We never won I used to be alright,
But now I can feel the pressure rise
Here is another new ordeal:
It's me again against my self-esteem Thank you for the signs;
They could've served me well, but I was blind
Thank you for your time;
It was good to have you by my side It's a status quo again -
A draw in every game we play
I guess that sums it up;
We never lost,
We never won Not a chance we'll ever change
Or that we'll find the one to blame
No one's right or wrong;
We never lost,
We never won My smile is just a little wry;
I can take it with a grain of salt
Instead of getting sleep, I try
To make up for my lost and precious time Thank you for the signs;
I bet you knew they were out of sight
Thank you for your time;
I wish I'd known I was wasting mine
