

Hyperborea

Horse the Band

...Then came winter's bitterness.
Numbness swept down from the east.
The lost cold and hungry gently collapse into the endless fields of soft luminous white. She sulks from silver towers, she could save a life.
He says he hates us and he's afraid to try--and I know why.
Trapped under winter's paw,
I'm the animal.
Frost invades and steals my breathing.
Distant dimples glut with glitter and comfortable.
Outside the wolves are waiting.
Don't trust man,
don't trust girl,
don't trust animals,
trust in steel.
Don't stop moving,
don't stop breathing. She sulks from silver towers, she could save a life.
He says he hates us and has no words to try and I know why.
When nature calls,
eat the kill.
When nature calls,
trust in steel. Don't stop moving, don't stop breathing. When nature-- Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>