Take the Chance

Peter, Paul & Mary

Advisory - the following lyrics contain explicit language:

There's a little girl playing in the garden
She thinks that she's alone and no one sees
But the beauty of it all as the daisy petals fall
Is the wish she's made that's whispered in the breeze
There's the wish in the breezeWon't you take the chance and let your tears start falling
Ignore the fearful warnings of your mind
Let your heart for once do all the talking
And believe that you deserve for the sun to shine
Believe that you deserve for the sun to shineThere's an old woman sitting in the doorway
She greets the people, each one as they pass
Sometimes they hover 'round her for her wisdom
Sometimes so she'll remind them how to laugh
They know that she'll remind them how to laughSo won't you take the chance and let your tears start falling
Ignore the fearful warnings of your mind
Let your heart for once do all the talking
And believe that you deserve for the sun to shine
Believe that you deserve for the sun to shineNow on a hill there stands a cross above a graveyard
And the simple word carved in it says 'forgive'
No war or killing anger can match the force it carries
It can heal the generations so that other ones can live
It can heal us, so we can liveSo won't you take the chance and let your tears start falling
Ignore the fearful warnings of your mind
Let your heart for once do all the talking
And believe that you deserve for the sun to shine
Believe that you deserve for the sun to shineNow there's a moment between forward and retreating
When you're just not sure which path you ought to choose
Then the sun shines brightly on the golden meadow
And suddenly, you're not at all confused
Suddenly, you're not confusedThat's when you take the chance and let your tears start falling
And ignore the fearful warnings of your mind
And you let your heart for once do all the talking
And believe that you deserve for the sun to shine

You always did deserve for the sun to shineI love you, and I want the sun to shine
I love you, and I want the sun to shine

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/