

I'll Close My Eyes

Julie Roberts

how can a man lie next to a woman
a woman who loves him and still feel alone there was a day i lite up your whole world now the suns hanging low and the skys growing colder
i'll close my eyes
pretend this aint a happening
i'll close my eyes
those taillights i'll never see i just can't bare
to see this house empty as empty as the hole in my chest where my heart used to be
so i don't have to watch you leave you left your ring on the dining room table you come home late we don't even fight
once we were lovers
now i hardly know you you turned down the light night after night i laid by your side
i'll close my eyes
and those taillights i'll never see i just can't bear
as empty as the whole in my chest where my heart used to me
i'll close my eyes
i just can't bear to see this house empty
