

Trial Of Tears

Dream Theater

Under the sun, there is nothing to hide
Under the moon, a stranger waits inside
People disappear, the music fades away
    Splashing through the rain
    I'll dream with them one day
        It's raining, raining
    On the streets of New York City
        It's raining, raining
        Raining deep in heaven
I may have wasted all those years
They're not worth their time in tears
I may have spent too long in darkness
    In the warmth of my fear
    Take a look at yourself
        Not at anyone else
        Tell me what you see
        I know the air is cold
        I know the streets are cruel
        But I'll enjoy the ride today
            It's raining, raining
        On that streets of New York City
            It's raining, raining
            Raining deep in heaven
            Raining deep in heaven
I may have wasted all those years
They're not worth their time in tears
I may have spent too long in darkness
    In the warmth of my fears
And as I walk through all my myths
    Rising and sinking like the waves
With my thoughts wrapped around me
    Through a trial of tears
Hidden by disguise, stumbling in a world
    Feeling uninspired, he gets into his car
Not within his eyes to see, open up, open up
Not much better than you man, you know
    Still awake
    I continue to move along
    Cultivating my own nonsense

Welcome to the wasteland
Where you'll find ashes, nothing but ashes
Still awake
Bringing change, bringing movement, bringing life
A silent prayer thrown away, disappearing in the air
Rising, sinking, raining deep inside me
Nowhere to turn, I look for a way back home
It's raining, raining
It's raining, raining
It's raining, it's raining
It's raining, raining
