

Still Breathing

Duran Duran

Home, it's not brick or stone
Or comfort in the firelight
Not in that sense anyway Dreams, if only I had known
But these things always seem
So much clearer at a distance I'm walkin' out of this town
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there
I've burned the place to the ground
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again Words, only could break that ring
You know the words still sting
So much harder than the blows ever did Heart, though it's hot and violent
My head is cool and quiet
As the ashes that fall from the sky I'm walkin' out of this town
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there
I've burned the place to the ground
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again Now I know this shattered feeling
Trampled but still breathing
I'm just waitin' for a good day I'm walkin' out of this town
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there
I've burned the place to the ground
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again
I'm never going back there
I'm never going back there again
