Chahine

Trembling knees

I always dream about a deadly earthquake

That shakes the state, smoke and flames

Always make it oh, so hard to speak and see, I can't escape Wait for me, I'm so afraid

But you always seem so secure oh and oh so sure

I'm so sorry but everything I keep close to me runs away

Oh, such a shame I'll hide amongst the trees

And breathe so quietly until the sun comes out

Until the morning comes, so many things scare me

Like her shadows dance amongst the trees I've got the skin and bones to stand and say

So many things to you, oh to you

Oh, but I lack the guts to hold the weight

And keep my blood so clam, so calm Trembling knees

I always dream about a deadly earthquake

That shakes the state, smoke and flames

Always make it oh, so hard to speak and see, I can't escape I'll hide amongst the trees

And breathe so quietly until the sun comes out

Until the morning comes, so many things scare me

Like her shadows dance amongst the trees And when the ground all breaks, I'll just run away

I'm sorry I still haven't changed I'll trade my veins for your nerves

Maybe then I'll stay strong Wait for me, I'm so afraid

But you always seem so secure oh and oh so sure

I'm so sorry but everything I keep close to me runs away

Oh, such a shame Trembling knees

I always dream about a deadly earthquake

That shakes the state, smoke and flames

Always make it oh, so hard to speak and see, I can't escape
