

Seven Veils

Peter Murphy

The day grows older
The moon appears in a mirror
A fire side mirror, a distant walker
Hears the words, go, do good deedsSo you feel okay
The moon and the sun
Partners in light
Separating, reflecting one light
Hearing this confusion wanes
No need to ask for wealth
Or one thing more nowAnd the night feels the same
As a cool, hot summers climb
With the voice comes no shame
As the walker walks the lineThe day grows older, the moon appears
Reflecting on his heart
Heavy weighed and pierced
The walker looks at his daysBad deeds gone by
For which he must pay
The moon and the sun
Partners in lightSeparating, reflecting one light
Hearing this confusion wanes
Another image hits
The seven veils of mindBut the night feels the same
As a cool, hot summers climb
With the voice comes no shame
As the walker hunts the line
