Heavy Feet

Local Natives

Powder in your hair
Staples in your jeans
Fireworks at the water
You were holy
A styrofoam cup
Held between your teeth
You're telling me how you're going to outlive your bodyWhat you said I wrote it down,
It won't say, it won't speak the same
Maybe I know better than
To read more than what's writtenAfter everything, after everything.
Left in the sun, shivering.
After everything.Gathering your storm
I talk to fill the space
Do you know where so and so was
When they were our age?
Then every night you seem,
To talk me out of everythingCareful what you say next,
Don't waste a single drop
What you said I wrote it down,
It won't say, it won't speak the sameAfter everything, after everything.
Left in the sun, shivering.
After everything.What you said I wrote it down,
It won't say, it won't speak the same
Maybe I know better than
To read more than what's thereAfter everything, after everything.
Left in the sun, shivering.
After everything.
