

Maybe Not Tonight

Lorrie Morgan/Sammy Kershaw

    Echoes of another time
    Playin' lightly on my mind
    There's many rivers still to cross
    To temper the bitterness in love
        Though what you say is true
    This might be it for me and you
    Maybe we can draw that line
        Maybe another time
    Well I wanna do what's right
        But maybe not tonight
    Memories of another time
    Those pretty eyes, that pretty frown
    And in the long grass where we lay
        Let the whole world fall away

    And though in time we walked apart
        But maybe not tonight
    I remember you were just a child
        Burning brightly and running wild
        We married on an August night
    No priest, no church, just a big moon shining bright
        Maybe we should be moving on
        And figure what is done is done
    Maybe we should break those vows
        Aw, but maybe not right now
    Maybe we should do what's right
        Maybe not tonight
    Maybe we should both just do what's right
        Baby, not tonight
