

The Golden Rule

Above The Golden State

From my apartment in my bedroom
To the sound of your headphones
We can dream of California
Like it won't run out of gold And I could sing the same thing over
But to me it don't get old
With the same hooks and the same words
You already know I'm still learning to live like I've heard nothing else
But this one thing, love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself
You can know everything but your knowing won't help
So once again love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself If you listened to the chorus
You don't need a second verse
And if you missed it, good, you're honest
I'll repeat what I said first
And I'll keep singing the same thing over
So you can't forget the words I'm still learning to live like I've heard nothing else
But this one thing, love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself
You can know everything but your knowing won't help
So once again, love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself I'm not trying to buy you, you're not mine to own
I've got nothing to sell you but all of my
La, la
La, la Jesus, what would You tell us today
If we asked You, what's the best thing we could do or say?
Bet You'd remind us of the things that You already said
To get the point across You did
To get it stuck inside our heads No questions left 'cause I'm still learning to live
Like I've heard nothing else
But this one thing, love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself
You can know everything but your knowing won't help
So once again love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself Yeah, once again love your Savior
And your neighbor like yourself
Oh, oh, oh, oh, oh, oh, oh, oh
